

Georgetown University School of Medicine
Committee on Admissions
2010 – 2011

The Committee on Admissions, Georgetown University School of Medicine, a duly constituted and independent body, has the responsibility of selecting students to be admitted to the School of Medicine. Members of the Committee on Admissions critically review applications and select the most viable applicants for matriculation into the School of Medicine. Those selected are a diverse group of men and women who uphold the School of Medicine's Jesuit tradition of cura personalis, caring for the whole person, and who will be dedicated to the care of others and the health needs of our society.
